Celebrate Storytime Turning 20

Do you have fond memories of coming to Storytime at your local library? Or did you introduce your kids to the joy of reading through these ever-popular sessions? Help us celebrate 20 years of Storytime by sharing your stories – and cake – at the Harry Bailey Memorial Library on October 10.

"Storytime is often the first experience many local kids have of books and reading and the sessions remain among the most popular happenings we have at the libraries. The fantastic storytellers are like local celebrities," said Catherine Turner, Library Operations and Programs Coordinator.

"It's wonderful that, in this age of online technology, they are still as popular as ever – and we're starting to see some of those early parents now coming back with their grandkids.

"As it's all about Storytime, we want people to share their memories or favourite picture books with us on the day – and beforehand on our Facebook page. Everyone is welcome."

Storytime sessions are held at the three libraries every week. They are all free.

Location:	Day:	Time:
Coffs Harbour	Wednesdays	11.00-11.45 am
Toormina	Thursdays	11.00-11.45 am
Woolgoolga	Tuesdays	11.00-11.45 am

The celebration will take place at the regular Coffs Harbour Storytime session on Wednesday, October 10, at 11am with Birthday Stories and cake.

Attendance is free, but people are being asked to register online for catering purposes via https://storytime\_birthday.eventbrite.com.au

If you can't make the 11am celebration, you can still call in for a piece of cake until 5pm on the day.

Contemporary Clay

Coffs Harbour Regional Gallery's Coordinator Cath Fogarty has a closer than usual interest in the Gallery's latest show as she was the original curator when it was first presented at the Australian Design Centre in 2016.

'Clay Intersections' highlights the work of eight ceramic artists who were selected for their diverse and very contemporary approaches to this ancient craft. They include Kenji Uranishi, Tania Rollond, Bridget Bodenham, Helen Earl, Ulrica Trulsson, Natalie Rosin and Cone 11's Colin Hopkins and Ilona Topolcsanyi.

With some of the artists being from an architectural, design or traditional studio-based background, the exhibition explores how they each draw their inspiration from the built or natural environment and how that influences their work.

Together, these eight artists are part of a new generation of craftspeople and designer/makers discovering the versatility of clay.

Lisa Cahill, ADC Director, says: "For more than 50 years the Australian Design Centre has been presenting the work of Australian craftspeople and designers. A lump of clay when combined with the skilled hands of a maker transforms into delicate, beautiful, often functional pieces just waiting to be held in other hands."

Cath Fogarty believes the resurgence in interest in ceramics is part of a rejection of our mass-produced world.

"From knitting and sewing through to artisan bread and cooking shows, there's an increasing number of people who like to have a connection to where their food and daily objects come from. I am sure this exhibition will strike a chord with many residents of the Coffs Coast who value hand-making and good design," she says.

'Clay Intersections' is on show until November 10.
